DETAILED ACTION

Applicants' arguments, filed 1/22/09, have been fully considered. Rejections and/or objections not reiterated from previous office actions are hereby withdrawn. The following rejections and/or objections are either reiterated or newly applied. They constitute the complete set presently being applied to the instant application.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112 – Written Description

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 15-19, 25, 26, 29, and 30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention.

The first paragraph of 35 USC 112 requires that the specification contain a written description of the invention. Accordingly, where a particular compound has not been specifically named or "otherwise exemplified", one is left to select from mere possibilities encompassed by the broad disclosure, with no guide indicating or directing that this particular selection should be made rather than any of the many others which could also be made. In re Ruschig, 154 USPQ 118, 122 (CCPA 1967). As elaborated by the court:

Specific claims to single compounds require reasonably specific supporting disclosure and while we agree with the appellants, as the board did, that naming is not essential, something more than the disclosure of a class of 1000, or 100, or even 48, compounds is required. Surely, given time, a chemist could name (especially with the aid of a computer) all of the half million compounds within the scope of the broadest claim, which claim is supported by the broad disclosure. This does not constitute support for each compound individually when separately claimed.

Here, mere indistinct terms (such as aryl, arylcarbonyl, heteroaryl, and heteroarylcarbonyl used to define the substitution on R3), do not suffice to meet the written description requirement, given such terms may include any multi-ring alkyl or hetero systems radical. As such, the limited disclosure at page 8-10 are not sufficient to describe the broader genus.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

Claims 15-22, 25, 26, 29, and 30 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Matsumoto (US 4,224,326) in view of Beidermann et al (WO 97/48397).

Matsumoto teaches immunosuppressive agents are used to treat suppress mammalian immune response as a means of treating the auto-immune disease rheumatoid arthritis (claims 1 and 9). Note, in Example 27, Matsumoto teaches rheumatoid arthritis is an inflammatory disorder where reduction of inflammation is a marker of immunosuppressive activity.

Matsumoto does not teach the immunosuppressive agent instantly claimed.

Beidermann et al does not teach immunosuppressive diseases to be treated.

One of ordinary skill in the art would find it obvious to use the compounds of the secondary reference in the method of the primary reference because they share common immunosuppressant activity with the compounds of the primary reference, and thus would be reasonably predicted to provide corresponding therapeutic effects. See Daichi Sankyo v. Aptotex, 84 USPQ2d 1285 (Fed. Cir. 2007).
